K. C. BOOSTERS SEE COLUMBIA

Commercial Club of Columbia Entertains the Tourists with a Banquet.

BAD ROADS IN BOONE CO.

Three Accidents Between Here and Rocheport—No One Injured.

A complete realization of the need of a better method of financing the University of Missouri is the definite thing that the 143 business men and women of Kansas City who visited Columbia last night will take back with them, according to Harry S. Frazer, one of the party.

Delayed by bad roads between here and Rocheport, by punctures and other accidents of travel, the main body of the automobile party, due here at 7 o'clock last evening, did not arrive until after 9 o'clock. The dinner given by the Commercial Club was served immediately after the arrival of the majority of the party. Frank B. Rollins, acting as toastmaster, introduced the various speakers.

President A. Ross Hill told of the needs of the University. William Hirth, publisher of the Missouri Farmer, gave a summary of the conditions in this part of the state. John B. Pew, a Kansas City attorney who is with the party, talked on "Conservation."

"The idea back of the good fellowship tour is to acquaint the members of the Chamber of Commerce of Kansas City with the needs of Missouri," said one of the party. "The Chamber of Commerce is doing all in its power to promote everything that is good for Missouri. The trip to Columbia," he said, "is particularly fortunate for us, for it has brought home to us the needs of the University, and I am sure that the Chamber of Commerce of Kansas City will do all in its power to promote the things that are needed here."

The party criticized severely the condition of the road between here and Rocheport. This they said was by far the worst piece of road they had seen. Leaving Rocheport, one car turning completely over. No one was seriously injured.

The members of the party paraded the streets of Columbia early this morning, wearing fancy hats and brightly-colored feathers. About twenty cars participated in the parade. Many who assisted the tourists in making a noisy demonstration of their enthusiasm.

They left at 9 o'clock for Jefferson City where they will stay tonight. Tomorrow they will return to Kansas City passing through California, Tipton, Sedalia and Warrensburg.

BOY SCOUTS TO BUILD CABIN

Committee for Different Parts of the Work Appointed.

A real log cabin in the woods, with a fire place, a swimming hole, a signal tower and everything—that is what Columbia Boy Scouts will have by spring if it was decided last night at a scout meeting at the Y. M. C. A.

The scouts intend to build their cabin themselves. They have already appointed a committee on chimney and fire place, a committee on walls, a committee on foundation and roof, a committee on furniture and a close-up committee. A suitable location for the cabin will be selected when the scouts hike to the woods next Sunday.

The boys will work on their cabin every Saturday until it is finished. They expect to complete the work by spring. Before beginning every scout is to sign an agreement to work regularly until the job is done.

At present there are about sixty scouts in Columbia. An effort will be made to greatly increase this number. But the need for scoutmasters is far greater than the need for more scouts according to O. R. Johnson, scoutmaster of Troop 3. At present Troop 2 is without a scoutmaster.

For Missouri: Generally fair tonight and Saturday; not much change in temperature.

WEATHER CONDITIONS

Moderate to heavy rains have fallen on the Gulf Coast from Texas to Florida, and light showers in parts of Kansas, Nebraska, and the Dakotas. In all other sections of the country fair weather has prevailed.

Temperatures continue below the seasonal average in all northern and central interior states. Light frosts have occurred along the Canadian border as far west as Michigan.

Precipitation 0.00. Noon yesterday: dry bulb, 75; wet bulb, 62; relative humidity, 48 per cent. 7 a. m. to day: dry bulb, 59; wet bulb, 55; relative humidity 79 per cent. Sun rose today 5:39 a. m. Sun sets 6:37 p. m. Moon rises 9:32 p. m.

CHANGE IN FACE AND FORM

Some changes in the Missouriian's appearance will be observed by the readers.

One change is the name. While the word Missouriian remains as from the first issue the name by which the newspaper is generally known here has now added to it the word Columbia to denote the place of publication and the word Evening to denote the time and frequency of issue.

The size and number of pages constitute another and important change. The Missouriian has heretofore been six columns to the page with an accustomed daily issue of four pages. The new form is eight columns to the page and from six to eight pages will be published each day. While supplying laboratory output for a larger number of Journalism students this increased size will give to the readers the largest daily newspaper ever regularly published in Columbia.

A third change is in the type used. The body type or "dress" of the new Missouriian has been selected with special reference to its clearness and beauty. It is Bodoni, a face of type designed by a famous Italian printer of the eighteenth century—of whom more may be said at another time—and recently recut to meet the demand for a newspaper type which should be legible, artistic and distinctive.

None of these changes will affect the policy and purpose of the Missouriian. They will, however, give larger opportunity to accomplish the purpose for which it is maintained and to carry out in broader lines its policy of public service.

FORTY HOURS UNDER WATER

Submarine With Thirty Men Caught and Held Down Off Henlopen.

SIGNAL BUOY RELEASED

War Invention Saves Lives of the Crippled Vessel's Crew.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—Down at the bow, and floundering at the end of the tow line which was tied to the rescue ship, the United States submarine S-5, which nearly became the tomb of thirty men, is proceeding towards Philadelphia. The submarine sank off the Cape of Henlopen.

According to the reports of the crew, the vessel was caught on the bottom and held. They were under the water forty hours.

They were kept alive by air which was forced down to them through a hole cut in the steel hull of the vessel after it had been raised close to the surface.

The rescue was made possible by a war invention—a buoy is attached to the submarine and carried with it at all times. In case of disaster the buoy is released and it floats on the surface. The ship Gorchalko was the first to use the buoy and proceeded to it and through it learned of the plight of the crippled submarine.

The steamer, Alansus, was the first to answer the S.O.S. call of the submarine. The submarine was attached to the Alansus by means of grab hooks and the vessel was raised close to the surface. A hole was then cut through the steel hull and air forced down to the crew of the submarine.

A dispatch to Secretary Daniels of the Navy said that the crew of the vessel were in bad shape but it was reported that they were recovering quickly. The

MORE CONGRATULATIONS ON NEFF HALL ARRIVE

Congratulatory messages received by the School of Journalism on the occasion of the dedication of Jay H. Neff Hall include the following, in addition to those already published:

Aaron Watson, Bewley Cottage, Launceston, Wilt, England, sends the following by mail:

JAY H. NEFF HALL—A SONNET
Pope Julius sent for Michael Angelo.
"Make me a tomb, such as men never saw."
That housewreath I love eternally below.

So Julius said. But if to Rome you go
You find no tomb of Julius. Some fell aw
Assailed him, and such omens as men dread
From evil things shadowed his soul with woe.

No vain ambition built this hall of ours.
A finer impulse, and a nobler thought,
Inspired a worthy heart and generous hand,
Here youth will learn to consecrate its powers.

To the world's service—souls with vigor fraught
Set sail with high emprise, and purpose grand.

This letter comes from Richard L. Stokes, of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, president of the American Journalists' Association.

No opportunity could be more inspiring than that afforded by the splendid extension of the work of America's oldest School of Journalism, now made possible through the generosity of Ward A. Neff in filling and most fitting tribute to the memory of his most eminent father.

We shall admire the structural beauty of Jay H. Neff Hall, and congratulate ourselves upon this notable reinforcement of the architectural esthetics of Missouri University; but mostly we shall vision it as a new shrine, dedicated to public service and to a journalism of ideals. Fresh and brighter fires shall be lighted upon its altars, to kindle in the hearts of youth an ardent devotion for that modern priesthood of democracy—the profession of journalism.

This is made possible an enlargement of the eminent benefits which the School of Journalism of Missouri University has in the past conferred upon the American public. When this pioneer School of Journalism was founded, college men who entered newspaper work were, to say the least, looked upon with a certain suspicion. One might have thought that to possess education, to have formed the habit of books, and to display the audacity of thinking at all outside one's little groove of the police courts and hospital runs, spelled a serious if not fatal handicap.

Today this has been changed. The first question which the managing editor puts to an applicant for editorial work is concerning his education. Today, also, other schools of journalism have sprung up all over
